216 Hart Senate Office Building
Washington, DC

European Health Care Systems:
Problem or Solution?

European health systems are often held up as models of universal, egalitarian, and cost-efficient health care that could and should be replicated in the United States. But what is the reality?

Four health policy experts who live under various European health systems, including single-payer, will share their insights and experience, offering factual analysis about the pros and cons of their countries' systems. Is government-run health care the answer? Learn what experts from the U.K., Sweden, and Switzerland know from experience that can help U.S. policymakers in their search for solutions to problems with health care in America.
